

Financially Fit?

Comparing the credit records of young servicemembers and civilians

Office of Servicemember Affairs | July 2020

Research Helps Guide OSA Education & Outreach

- The financial profile of servicemembers changes over the course of their military career, and after

- Research helps the Office of Servicemember Affairs (OSA) educate and empower servicemembers and their families to make better-informed decisions regarding consumer financial products over the military life-cycle

New Report Shows Evolution of Young Servicemembers' Credit Records

Question: How do young consumers build credit histories?

Answer: It depends on when they join the military, and how long they serve.

New Report Shows Evolution of Young Servicemembers' Credit Records

Question: How do young consumers build credit histories?

Answer: It depends on when they join the military, and how long they serve.

Age 18

Civilian

Enlistee

Enlistee

Age 24

Serves for 4 years

Serves for 6 years

Consumer Financial
Protection Bureau

Key Takeaways

- Random sample of nearly 300,000 de-identified credit records
 - Start observing at age 18, before most establish a credit history
 - Many young servicemembers have no credit history prior to joining active duty
- Servicemembers have different credit accounts than civilians
 - More often auto loans, credit cards
 - Less often student loans, accounts in collections
- Credit record at age 24 related to two aspects of military service
 - Age at entry
 - Time in service (best predictor in our data)

Servicemembers, Civilians Use Different Credit Products

Fraction of consumers with various types of accounts by age 24

Some Types of Products are Used More Often After Joining the Military

Fraction of consumers with an auto loan, by age at entry into military

Some Types of Products are Used More Often After Joining the Military

Fraction of consumers with an auto loan, by age at entry into military

Cohorts begin taking out more auto loans around the age at which they join

Some Types of Loans are No Longer Needed After Leaving the Military

Fraction of consumers with an auto loan by time in service

Some Types of Loans are No Longer Needed After Leaving the Military

Fraction of consumers with an auto loan by time in service

Cohorts begin closing auto accounts around the age they leave active duty

Some Types of Loans are No Longer Needed After Leaving the Military

Fraction of consumers with an auto loan by time in service

Cohorts begin closing auto accounts around the age they leave active duty

Consumer Financial
Protection Bureau

Servicemembers who leave within 1 year are more similar to civilians

Results Inform OSA's Mission

- Young servicemembers' credit histories evolve differently from civilians' in important ways
- Research helps identify key aspects of credit behavior
 - Points in military career when major credit-related decisions occur
 - Types of products and sizes of loans for typical servicemember
 - Subpopulations that do or do not use products, or have delinquencies/defaults
- The report lays groundwork for OSA and others to better understand military families' financial well-being

Download the Full Report and Executive Summary

<https://www.consumerfinance.gov/data-research/research-reports/>

Look for a follow-on report on young veterans in the first year after leaving active duty